Let the Summer Begin!

It started with a parade on Memorial Day. The sun was shining and the thermometer climbed into the seventies, maybe even touched eighty degrees.

During the next week the Olean Municipal Pool opened for the summer.

Olean High School hosted the Section 6 Track and Field Championships.

The Olean Professional Firefighters sponsored a fund raiser for the Fourth of July Fireworks.

Bradner Stadium opened for the season with the annual Bradner Bash.

Those pesky potholes continued to be patched.

And the planters on North Union Street started to be filled with flowers.
The Civil War Journal of Confederate W.W. Hartsill described his railroad journey from an Illinois prison camp to Fortress Monroe on the Virginia Peninsula. He was part of a prisoner exchange program. Travelling through our neck of the woods he commented on the names of the towns. He mentioned Salamanca and Cuba.

It was a route that many Confederate POW’s made until the program was disbanded. There was one who died en route. His name was unknown, but he was granted a proper funeral and burial here in Olean.

He is buried at Mount View Cemetery in the Field of Honor among his fellow Americans who bravely fought for our nation. His family never knew what happened to him, but the kind hearted locals did not let a war interrupt their civility toward another American.

The City of Olean honored the nation’s fallen veterans on Memorial Day. The celebration started sharply at 10:00 am with a parade down North Union Street to the South Union Street Bridge.

A ceremony took place on the bridge in memory of those who died at sea. The parade continued to the Veteran’s Field of Honor in Mount View Cemetery. As the Olean High School Band played The National Anthem our nation’s flag was raised. On the ridge above Veterans Field, the Honor Guard stood. The sound of Taps followed by a twenty-one gun salute hauntingly echoed against Mount Herman—a solemn reminder that our freedom was won by those who served our nation and gave their lives.

From the Mayor’s Office:

Summer time is quickly approaching. It is the season for longer and warmer days, as well as lawn mowers and home repair projects. I’d like to remind residents of some of the city’s policies and address some of the questions that have been asked.

I’ve heard a number of times that people do not want to do routine maintenance on their home citing high permit fees and fear that the project will trigger an increase in their assessments leading to higher taxes. This is not the case.

According to Captain Ed Jennings, Code Enforcement Officer, a building permit is required for structural changes and new construction. Projects such as deck and porch additions, re-roofing, foundation repairs, demolitions, and sheds larger than 100 square feet in size would need a permit. As would installations of new electrical service, new heating units or a solid fuel stove. A permit is required in these instances to protect the property owners. The Code Enforcement department has procedures to make sure that the construction is built according to specifications, that current zoning laws are met, and that the contractor is properly licensed and insured.”

There are many projects that do not need permits. Examples include fences, siding, house painting, as well as gutter and downspout replacement. Replacement windows generally do not need a permit; however, if there are structural changes when a window is replaced, a permit would be necessary. When in doubt, it’s probably a good idea to call Codes at 716-372-5683.

As for the cost of a permit, they generally run $35.00 plus $4.00 per thousand of building cost which includes material and labor.

Fearing an increased assessment is not necessary for routine maintenance. Nancy Champlin the city assessor explains that maintenance and repair work to replace items that have come to the end of their useful life and are necessary to retain the present value of the property, will not increase the assessment. However, renovations and additions that upgrade the condition of the property would result in an increase in property value.

I hope this clears up any misunderstandings that Olean residents have about the City’s policies. If residents have questions, please call my office and we will help you find the answer to your question.

THE CITY AND IT’S POWER SOURCE PLANT TREES

You see the trucks on US 86 frequently. They usually travel in a convoy and are headed toward a disaster or into a snowstorm. The crews inside the trucks arrive to restore electricity. Not too far behind the National Grid convoy, the Asplundh trucks follow. The wind, the snow, the ice, Mother Nature in general, can be very destructive to trees—and professional maintenance is necessary to keep tree limbs off of our electric lines.

Stand on a street and look at the utility poles—the electric lines are on top. They are the first in line to get hit when a tree goes down or a limb falls off. That is why National Grid is constantly checking the trees that grow near the lines and prune them if necessary—before we get hit by a storm.

To give back to the city the company has established a program called 10,000 Trees and Growing in which Olean has joined. Each year, around Arbor Day, National Grid Employees help the city plant and pay for a number of trees.

This year National Grid Arborists joined Olean’s forester, Sue Cooper and other volunteers at the Veteran’s Field of Honor in Mountain View Cemetery on May 13th to plant eight Black Locust Trees. According Sue Cooper, the Black Locust trees, six of which are planted along the fence, will grow straight and reach a height of about thirty feet. Those two features will keep the branches away from the electric lines that travel along West River Road.

Jay McIntosh, the local National Grid arborist, was joined by his colleagues from the Buffalo and Genesee Regions for the event. They were available to answer questions from the public, unfortunately not too many people came, it was an incredibly rainy morning that turned into a very hot day. A good day for a tree, not so good for people.
