Put on your gloves and pull down that hat; Old Man winter is showing his wrath.

But the City of Olean is always prepared—for whatever those clouds and winds have in store for our little city that is tucked into the hills and sliced by the river.

The men who crew the plows work through the night and into the day to keep our streets as snow free as possible. And—it is quite a chore.

There are 172 lane miles of roads in Olean that have to be attended to—plowed and salted. One man is on duty from 11:00 pm until 7:00 am. He does his best—but if the storm is relentless and snow is piling up, more men are called in and more trucks are deployed.

Olean has seven trucks that plow through the city; if necessary they are supplemented with four smaller trucks. If the snow doesn’t stop and the crew is maxed-out, the City’s mechanics step into the plowing function. It is a very well run operation and Olean’s residents certainly benefit from it.

There are also the City-owned sidewalks. They really have never been measured—but a ball park figure would be 20-25 miles of sidewalks have to be cleared by the Parks Crew. They are out very early—to make the sidewalks passable for the residents and students who walk to work or school suring those cold morning hours.

What about the snow that piles up in the middle of State and Union Streets—ever wonder where that goes? According to Tom Windus, the Director of Public Works, it is dumped on a number of the City’s properties. This year Franchot Park is the recipient of much of the snow. Glenda Jester in the Auditor’s office has very fond memories of playing in the snow mountains that grew in Franchot during her childhood winters.

It’s not only an essential element in our diet, but salt is also a key ingredient in snow removal. During each snow event, the City uses about 100 tons of salt. Whew! A fact from Wikipedia—of the salt manufactured world wide—6 percent goes to food and 8 percent go to de-icing highways.

Anyway hopefully in two months time the plows will be long gone and the City’s crews will be tackling other problems that the four seasons tend to drag into Olean.
From the Mayor’s Office:

Another winter and loads of snow—Olean is definitely a four season town. I'd like to thank the City's staff for persevering the cold front. The streets and parks departments, have worked very hard to keep our roadways and city-owned sidewalks clear. The City's water department has been out thawing pipes and fixing water main breaks. The fire department has fought fires, been on emergency calls and following-up on codes violations. And the police department has been patrolling the streets. The City's departments work very hard during the winter months.

The OLDC decided to celebrate our winter weather with the first annual Squirrel City Frigid Fest. Who knew that soft ball and kick ball could be so much fun in the snow? The Frigid Fest was a new use for the City's stadium and proceeds from the event will be targeted for the restoration of Forness Park. Thank you to everyone who worked on that event.

When I campaigned, residents were concerned about the deterioration of their neighborhoods. I have established a blight task force that is taking on that problem—head-on.

The committee consists of Adam Jester, the Council President, the City's Department Heads, and representatives from the code enforcement office and IT department. During February a phone hotline was set-up (376-5628) and the committee met with the commissioner of the Department of Social Services in Cattaraugus County. More to come on the fight against blight soon.
FRIGID FEST 2015
Many city employees volunteered to monitor their blood pressure for a February Health Program. High blood pressure is a serious disease—with no warning signs and if not treated can lead to strokes, heart attacks, kidney problems and eye problems.

Each week volunteers took their blood pressure three times. And while monitoring their blood pressure they received suggestions on how to alter their lifestyle to be more healthy.

Week One: A suggestion on fruits and vegetables portions based on weight and calorie intake.
Week Two: Suggestions on how to control portion sizes.
Week Three: A suggestion to read labels and watch sodium intake.
Week Four: Suggestions on how to increase physical activity.

OPD on FB

Who gets over eight hundred Facebook followers in less than a month? Answer: celebrities and the Olean Police Department. According to Captain Bob Blovsky, the department’s new Facebook page is a way to get information out to the public. An added benefit is that public participation can help the OPD locate a criminal.

“If we have video or a picture, the public sometimes can help the department make an identification,” Captain Blovsky said. “Other police departments have been using the internet and they have seen some good results.”

The Olean Police Department Facebook presence is new and the department is open to any suggestions to make it a better page. And if you haven’t seen the page yet—it’s worth the visit—please follow this link.

The phrases, “I’m bored,” and “there’s nothing to do in Olean,” should never be muttered. If you, a child or a senior are looking for something to do, just click www.cityofolean.org/youth and something will turn-up. Guaranteed. From the City’s after school program for students to the activities at the Senior Center. From skating at the ice rink to SlendAreobics in the William O. Smith Rec. Center—Olean has it all. It’s just a click away!

The Olean Senior Center and Mayor Aiello said goodbye to the center’s Executive Director. Kathleen Hamed. Kathy is changing her focus a bit; her children are in Missouri and that is where her three, almost four, grandchildren live.
She has been with the Senior Center for twenty years and will be truly missed.
